Chapter 384: The Nature of Arch-Celestials and Arch-Dragons

The Divine Creations of Ashborn and Sung Su-Ho

As the True Celestial Being and the True Dragon God, Ashborn and Sung Su-Ho transcended their roles as mere entities of immense power. They became creators in their own right, shaping armies of unparalleled beings to uphold their realms' sanctity.

The Arch-Celestials of Ashborn

Forged from the purest light emanating from Ashborn's divine essence, the Arch-Celestials were celestial beings of unmatched power and purity. Each Arch-Celestial was a manifestation of light and law, created to serve as guardians, emissaries, and enforcers of the True Celestial Realm's will.

Characteristics:

1. Immense Wings:

Each Arch-Celestial possessed between 2,400 to 6,000 radiant wings that glowed with celestial brilliance.

The wings were symbols of their authority, with their glow capable of illuminating entire galaxies.

2. Ethereal Bodies:

Their forms were incorporeal, shimmering like starlight. Though they could manifest solid forms, they preferred their luminous states.

3. Weapons of Light:

Each carried divine weapons imbued with Ashborn's essence, capable of severing the fabric of reality and dispelling darkness.

4. Role:

Four Arch-Celestials bore Ashborn's throne, their presence reinforcing his dominion.

The others led centillions of Celestial Armies, ensuring that Ashborn’s will was carried out across the multiverse.

5. Names (Example):

Luminel: The Arch-Celestial of Dawn.

Eryndor: The Arch-Celestial of Judgement.

Valtheon: The Arch-Celestial of Radiance.

Seraphina: The Arch-Celestial of Mercy.

The Arch-Dragons of Sung Su-Ho

Born from the intense black flames of Sung Su-Ho's godly essence, the Arch-Dragons were embodiments of power, ferocity, and resilience. They were the apex predators of the multiverse, tasked with enforcing the True Dragon God Realm's dominion.

Characteristics:

1. Draconic Majesty:

Each Arch-Dragon had 1,800 to 5,000 black flame wings that roared like infernos, their heat capable of melting stars.

Their wings radiated destructive energy, capable of incinerating anything within their presence.

2. Gigantic Forms:

In their true forms, Arch-Dragons could span light-years, their scales glittering with the energy of creation and destruction.

However, they could compress into humanoid forms for convenience.

3. Breath of Annihilation:

Each Arch-Dragon could unleash devastating dragon breath imbued with Sung Su-Ho's essence, erasing entire realms.

4. Role:

Four Arch-Dragons served as bearers of Sung Su-Ho’s throne, their strength unmatched.

The others commanded centillions of Dragon Armies, ensuring Sung Su-Ho’s dominion remained unchallenged.

5. Names (Example):

Ignathar: The Arch-Dragon of Flame.

Nalthorax: The Arch-Dragon of Destruction.

Dravania: The Arch-Dragon of Shadows.

Thalvor: The Arch-Dragon of Eternity.

Invisibility and Invincibility

Both the Arch-Celestials and Arch-Dragons shared unique traits of invisibility and invincibility:

1. Invisibility:

They remained hidden from the perception of all beings except their creators, unless they chose to manifest.

2. Invincibility:

Their essence was directly tied to their creators, making them indestructible unless willed otherwise by Ashborn or Sung Su-Ho.

The Perfect Balance

The Arch-Celestials symbolized order, light, and purity, while the Arch-Dragons embodied chaos, fire, and destruction. Together, they maintained balance in the multiverse, their mere existence reinforcing the authority of the True Celestial Being and the True Dragon God.

Their loyalty was absolute, their power unmatched, and their purpose clear: to serve and protect their creators' realms and uphold the will of the Divine Triad.
